Angle measuring devices may be applied in many uses, such as distance measurement, arc welding, metal fabricating processes, and the like. A known type of angle measuring apparatus comprises a probe, which is rotated and it transmits a unique sequence of pulses, having a period determined by the angular velocity of the probe. The pulses are processed, and from the processed pulses a measure of the angle is obtained. In such a device, the pulses are attenuated in dependence of the angular position of the probe, but this is compensated by the application of an electronically controlled attenuation by which the pulses are received and amplified at a comparator. The previous devices have the drawback that the pulses have a small amplitudes. The result is an insufficient sensitivity. The same drawback also occurs in angle measuring devices with rotating wheels, wherein the wheels are rotated and pulses are generated by pulses marked on a disc which is attached to the wheel. These known devices have the drawback that they are not suitable for small angles. A further drawback is the fact that the output is sensitive to vibrations.David Harris (author) David Harris (born 1955 in Washington, D.C.) is an American author and communications consultant and a past president of ISTE. I've been using wamp for a while but lately I started trying to learn some APACHE. I want to make my local Apache2 server to act as a proxy server and to this end I've been experimenting with config files and with changing my ProxyPass settings. Basically, the project is a Facebook App I'm working on, and I want to be able to share some of my own content on other sites and to this end I tried connecting to the proxy server through FB's developers section and it works, so the issue isn't there. The issue that I can't quite get is that whenever I change to a new config file, I get double requests for the same thing. So, I changed it to /etc/httpd/conf/httpd.conf and restarted the Apache server, and here's my current /etc/httpd/conf/httpd.conf file: ProxyPreserveHost On ProxyPass / ProxyPassReverse / # HOSTS file to redirect requests to the 3e33713323
