Pete Townshend takes an election-year break for a week, and he has a gift for every occasion. That includes the birth of his first child, as the Who's founder and guitarist announces on Instagram. The birth of his daughter was a surprise, he said, and he will be with his family at all times. "Thanks to all those friends who made it possible!" Townshend said in the post. Townshend has been touring the U.S. in support of his 1973 musical classic "Quadrophenia," which looks back at the early days of rock 'n' roll. The Who have been touring since November.
