Corticosterone causes the expression of amylin and insulin genes in the rat anterior pituitary. Studies using a competitive hybridization assay demonstrated that adrenalectomy (ADX) decreases the expression of amylin (AMY) and insulin (INS) genes in the rat anterior pituitary. To elucidate the role of corticosteroids in the regulation of AMY and INS genes, the effects of corticosterone administration on AMY and INS mRNA levels were examined in this study. The levels of AMY and INS mRNA in the pituitaries of rats were significantly decreased after acute corticosterone (500 microg/day s.c.) administration for 6 days. The decreased AMY and INS mRNAs were normalized with dexamethasone treatment (0.5 mg/day s.c.). The results suggest that corticosterone might act directly on the pituitary to produce AMY and INS.

Q: C++: Increment a property in a class and pass it as a argument
How do I assign a property (i.e. int x = 0;) to a class, increment the property, and call the class method where that argument is a member of a different class and passed to the constructor? In C# this would be called "Increment and use class-static-member; How would this be done in C++? A: This is possible with member function of non-static member class. Example: #include class test { public: int x; int getx() { return x; } void setx(int y) { x = y; } void inc() { x++; } }; int main() { test A, B, C; A.inc(); B.inc(); C.setx(A.getx()); // change B's value in C C.setx(B.getx()); // change A's value in C return 0; } come back from surgery... ever. This work is a continuation of a body of research which focuses on the genetics of early renal injury to design, develop, and test strategies to prevent the initiation of renal disease. In the current proposal, we will focus on the development of two genetic strategies to protect mice from the initiation of renal injury to maximize potential translation to human disease. In Specific Aim 1, we will explore the effect of homozygous deletion of the mediator complex, which consists of the transcriptional coactivator, PGC-11 and associated coactivators, on the development of renal injury following nephrotoxic injury. In Specific Aim 2, we will develop a conditional PGC-11 knockout mouse using the Cre-LoxP system to target the deletion of the PGC-11 gene specifically to podocytes to evaluate the effect of deleting PGC-11 in podocytes on the development of renal injury. PUBLIC HEALTH RELEVANCE: This application aims to explore the genetic basis for the development of renal disease in the early stages in mice to determine effective strategies for the prevention of the disease. The approach is to study genetic mutations that might interfere with the function of the cell to determine whether that mutation inhibits the development of renal injury in the mutant cell. Ultimately, these studies may identify genetic mutations in humans that will provide intervention in the course of the disease.

Q: How to join this I have 2 tables which is Table1 Col1 A B Table2 Col1 Col2 Col3 Col4 I am trying to create a union query which will give me: Col1, Col2, Col3, Col4 A,1,A,2 B,3,B,4 Thanks A: Your question wasn't really well-formed, so I'm going to guess at what you're looking for. select t1.col1, t1.col2, t2.col3, t2.col4 from table1 t1 join table2 t2 on t1.col1 = t2.col1
