Makes it more adorable, I admit. This game looks like a predictable "Pokemon x Dragon Quest" and I'm sorry to say it's not that interesting either. You see, the fact that the character design is adorable does not make up for the fact that the game is extremely slow-paced. Why? Because there are dungeons. You find your own way through the gorgeous landscapes because you have to find, gather, and equip various types of equipment and weapons. Before you start the dungeon, you have to equip powerful equipment and obtain its magic, and then you find some weapons for the air and land on the ground, and also some for the water. The resources required to go back to the beginning are needed for the fight to begin, so if you run out of stock, you have to wait until you refill it. While you run around and fight monsters on the field, it's a lot of waiting. While you spend all your time waiting for something, your character will slowly level-up. The enemies you fight decrease in power as you level-up, and every time you move to an adjacent area, you also level-up, so it's a very confusing task to level up while fighting for survival. It's not even about finding a way to defeat the monsters, it's about finding a way to beat the level system. Also, the game is extremely heavy on grinding. If you level-up and the enemies become weaker, you are supposed to defeat the enemy yourself. So, if you are constantly losing, you have to get the two most powerful weapons out of the pool and beat the enemy by your own. If you do that, you have to go back to the starting point, equip it, recharge it, and then set up the battle. It's even more annoying to go through such a tedious process if you're trying to level up a character that specializes in a specific weapon set. In short, it's just a difficult level-up process. I'm not sure whether the game is intended to be a trading card game like "Pokemon x Dragon Quest" or not, but it seems like the game is purposely made to make you grind. It's really hard to play if you don't feel like grinding. I can certainly understand that the
