“Real-life motion captures the dynamic variety of players,” commented Uwe Kraushaar, FIFA Technical Director. “With real life action in the engine, different types of movements will look and play out different. This also allows us to create amazing acceleration, deceleration and recovery moves.” All 22 players in the current Real Madrid squad were filmed by a professional motion capture team while playing a complete game. Players who train with Real Madrid were filmed by a separate motion capture team at his club. The players are recorded at two different angles. “Our goal is to bring the players in the game closer to the players in the real world,” added Kraushaar. “This is achieved in two ways: First, by capturing the players real-life movements and applying them to the player models that you see in the game, and second by adding very important on-the-ball actions to the game.” As FIFA 21 was the first FIFA game to feature on-the-ball actions from the first moment of gameplay, EA Sports developed the technology to be even more realistic and to increase the intensity of the on-the-ball interactions. On-the-ball actions are important to develop and execute successful dribbles, passes and shots. The EASI-VAR features allow game players to change the movement of either the ball or defender, and the system automatically switches between the two whenever it senses the player performing the on-the-ball interaction. The new motion capture technology developed for Fifa 22 Cracked Version allows EA Sports to create even more variety of possible actions, such as jumping over or through players. The EASI-VAR continues to represent the player's action as he or she performs the on-the-ball interaction. This also creates multiple collision-free paths for players as they jump over the ball. Also new for Fifa 22 Product Key are "extremely fast ball acceleration" and "super deceleration" – two new and essential features in modern football. The EASI-VAR and the motion capture technology are used to create both styles of ball acceleration and deceleration. "FIFA 22 is a milestone title for us," commented Nelson Rodríguez, Product Marketing Manager for FIFA. "The combination of real-life data and our cutting-edge game engine brings the game to a new
