I have an array with a list of product ids (can be any length) and I want to remove all hrefs in the page so that it goes back to the homepage when the user clicks outside of the href. What's the best way to do it? Thanks. A: You don't need jQuery. document.links[0].href = "" If that's not an option, then have a look at this query. A: $.each(yourArray, function(index, value) { $(value).attr("href", ""); }); A: Assuming your array is wrapped inside an object, you can get the array of hrefs and set them to the empty string. var array = [{'id' : 1, 'href' : ''}, {'id' : 2, 'href' : ''}]; for(var i = 0; i Q: Android - ListView auto-increment and remain editable I have a list view which automatically creates a new row every time the user pushes a button and I cannot change this property for some reason. I want the list view to be editable while the list is created, but I cannot seem to find any help online. I tried this solution: Auto-increment a listview, but it does not help. Any help is appreciated. A: If you don't want any manual addition of rows, consider using an ArrayAdapter. With an adapter, you can have your ListView be editable and never have a problem with automatically creating rows. Just pass the adapter to your ListView. Here is a link from the
