I run into a problem trying to compile the --enable-gunzip-test source (which takes a test from gzip.c and compiled into the addend directory) because the configure script generates some errors. I'm running it on Squeak 3.3.2 and here is the output it gives me: The problem here is you are missing some gz* compatibility library or something. Try to run make lib and make libtest (see configure --help for all available options. Configure should add something like'makedepends="gzip-libc gzip-libz"' to the generated Makefile. Will you try compiling this for me? It's quite possible that I have missed an option you need from configure -- but I don't know what to look for. Interestingly, /usr/lib/libgzip.so.1.gz exists while /usr/lib/libgzip.a does not. /usr/lib/libgzip.so.1.gz is symlink to libgzip.so.1.gz. /usr/lib/libgzip.so.1 is symlink to libgzip.so.1.a. /usr/lib/libgzip.a is symlink to libgzip.a. So, let me introduce you to a new library structure. There is the original library (libgzip.so.1.a, libgzip.so.1, libgzip.so). And there is a symlink libgzip.so.1.gz. If you are interested in patching gunzip to compile with Squeak 3.3.2, the configure script will look for a file libgzip.
